

Whereas tradition and prestige is important to the amateur radio community, not relaxing the Morse code requirement at all may result in continued stunted growth of the amateur ranks. I don't believe that the entire HF bands should be opened up, either, but a compromise in the middle to whet new hams' interests in HF operation would be more beneficial to growth.